Dirtbag Taiwan - Long Dong Climbing & Cultural Experience

August 16-30, 2010. Promotional Rate: $1,550.00

Overview

Dirtbag Taiwan is designed for budget climbers who long for an international climbing vacation. The climbing area Long Dong (aka Dragon Cave in Chinese) offers over 500 sea-cliff sport and traditional routes on hard sandstone. Routes are rated from 5.4-5.13, suitable for climbers of all abilities. Taiwan is well-known for its beautiful scenery, astonishing landscape, worldly culture, friendly atmosphere, and delicious food. After a hard day of climbing accompanied by splendid sunshine and ocean breezes, climbers relax their muscles in natural hot springs, and enjoy mouth-watering food in night markets of distinct characteristics. Rest day activities include a tour of the capital city, Taipei, and a visit to the National Palace Museum, where people witness Chinese history via stunning artifacts dating back to 1400 B.C. “Your Friend. Your Guide.” is the philosophy of LittlePo Adventures who delivers relationship-based adventures in Taiwan and China. Dirtbag Taiwan is guided and facilitated by a bilingual and professional outdoor educator, who is also a native of Taiwan.

Inclusions & Exclusions

The promotional rate of $1,550.00 includes the following: breakfasts and dinners (except for an optional seafood feast at northern shore), ground transportation in Taiwan, lodging (camping & shared B&B style rooms), admission to National Palace Museum, bilingual guide, and elementary Mandarin conversational lessons. The price does not include airfare, checked baggage fees, visa fee, travel insurance, immunization, lunches, snacks, drinks, and gratuity.

Travel Info

Participants should fly to Taiwan Taoyuan International Airport (aka Chiang Kai-Shek International Airport. The three-letter code is TPE). US Passport holders can stay in Taiwan for up to 30 days without a visa.
